

The Pacific World
A Bibliography of Sources Held at the Huntington Library

Bibliographer's Note:

This bibliography was compiled from Library of Congress subject headings broadly related to the Pacific world, including "Pacific," "Hawaii," "China," etc. It contains both primary and secondary sources from the library's reference, rare book, and manuscript collections. The sources range from a wide time period from the seventeenth through the twentieth centuries; most are from the nineteenth century where the library's collection is particularly rich. The bibliography is arranged by subject and cross-referenced where appropriate. The library's holdings cover a wide array of topics with a particular focus on diplomatic relations between the U.S. and Pacific nations, American exploration in the Pacific, immigration from Pacific countries to the United States, trade between the United States and Pacific nations, American missionary work in the Pacific, and American travel in the Pacific. The library has a particularly rich set of sources on Hawaii in the nineteenth century.
