The Federal Union

SECOND EDITION

A history of the United States to 1865

The second edition of The Federal Union, nationally known as the most readable and objective presentation of American history available, displays a completely new format. In addition to a double-column page and a new cover, there are several hundred new illustrations which have been planned to extend cultural and social coverage. About 150 new maps have been prepared, correlated with the text in order to vitalize particular points being made in the discussion. Instructor's Manual to be available.

University of Texas

G. C. FITE

J. S. EZELL

University of Oklahoma

Here is an outstanding selection of readings and documents which can be used to great advantage with any general textbook in American history. Geared to the needs and abilities of college freshmen and sophomores, the readings are mainly interesting secondary accounts in social and economic subjects. Since the editors believe that readings on a large number of topics confuse the student without increasing his understanding, the number of important subjects has been purposely limited. The readings are skillfully organized into two volumes which provides easily understandable assignments.

New Knopf Texts in Medieval History

THE MIND OF THE MIDDLE AGES

by Frederick B. Artz, Oberlin College

This unusual synthesis of the culture of the Middle Ages covers the whole period from 200 A. D. to 1500 A. D. and explores every facet of the medieval mind. It is a general map from whence to explore more specialized works, presenting the important aspects of the history of medieval thought in both the Near East and the West. In addition to European materials, the author discusses classical antiquity, Jewish and Early Christian background, and Byzantine and Islamic Civilizations. He examines the politics and philosophy, the literature, music, architecture and painting, the science, education and social thought of the period. This is an extraordinarily comprehensive and thoughtful book.

A HISTORY OF THE MIDDLE AGES

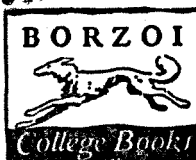

by Sidney Painter, The Johns Hopkins University

In this compact history an eminent Medievalist explores the broad lines of political and economic development during the Middle Ages without chronological fragmentation or unnecessary detail. Unmatched in style and readability, this new volume examines equally and comparatively the three chief countries of Western Europe: England, France, and the Holy Roman Empire, re-emphasizing the tactics and equipment of military history, and discussing the history of the Church as a central theme. The latest scholarship, a lively style, and insights born of great experience as teacher and writer, make this an outstanding book for college students.

A HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

by Harry J. Carman and Harold C. Syrett
Columbia University

This is an outstanding example of textbook writing and publishing.

GEORGE H. KNOLES, Stanford University

A most attractive work. Its emphasis on the growth and change of society is comprehensive and penetrating without relapsing into cataloguing and provides the matrix of politics and economics in their interplay. The bibliographical notes are remarkably comprehensive, judicious, and accurate.

J. B. BREBNER, Columbia University

This two-volume set constitutes one of the finest efforts in the American history textbook field. They are well-organized, neatly balanced between fact and interpretation, and written with remarkable clarity.

THE FAITH OF OUR FATHERS

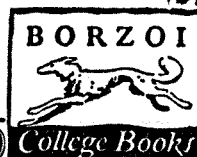

edited by Irving S. Mark, Brooklyn College and Eugene L. Schwaab

This volume of uncommonly refreshing readings selected from original sources expresses the ideals and aspirations of the plain people who lived in the United States from 1790 to the Civil War. In documents accessible for the most part only in newspapers and periodical files, ordinary citizens make articulate the broad base of civil, political, and religious freedom in our democratic heritage. The editors, a college professor and a rare-book collector, have judiciously selected the most relevant parts of speeches, editorials, pamphlets, and fugitive pieces, and organized them through headnotes and introductions into a meaningful volume of illuminating readings.

Political Practices in Washington's Virginia

by CHARLES S. SYDNOR

A study of the great generation of Virginia statesmen: Washington, Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, from which the author discerns the backgrounds—political and educational—conducive to the spirit of responsible citizenship and leadership. An entertaining account of practices in politics which often parallel those of the present, but in which a spirit of political integrity is always apparent. $3.50

The Railroads of the Confederacy

by ROBERT C. BLACK, III

In the first great "railroad war" neither the steam locomotives nor their owners were easily harnessed to the support of the Confederacy. States' Rights and individualism together with lack of drastic command from the Confederate government combined to presage the chaos of ultimate defeat. Mr. Black interweaves a scholarly history of the railroads with an absorbing picture of adventurous men and iron horses. Profusely illustrated. $6.00

The American Diaries of Richard Cobden

Edited by ELIZABETH HOON CAWLEY. In 1835 a young English cloth manufacturer came to this country for a three-month visit and jotted down his impressions in a private diary. He kept the same sort of informal account when he returned in 1859, one of Britain's most distinguished statesmen. Intended only for his personal use, the diaries afford new insight into Cobden's development and candid glimpses into American life, as informative and richly entertaining as a collection of Currier & Ives. 249 pages, illustrated, $4.00

Selections from Bayle's "Dictionary"

Edited by E. A. BELLER and M. DU P. LEE, Pierre Bayle's Dictionary was a major source of information for the radical thinkers of the 18th century. Disguised in it were daring attacks on religion and intolerance, a new critical approach to the writing of history and biography, a keen sense of the implications of the scientific method and of the Enlightenment. Among those who were influenced by Bayle were Voltaire, Diderot, Gibbon, Mandeville, Jefferson, and, later, Herman Melville.

These selections, from the English edition of 1734-1738, are intended as an introduction to an important landmark in Western intellectual history.

Bentham and the Ethics of Today

By DAVID BAUMGARDT, Based on Bentham's original statements (many of them here published and analyzed for the first time), this painstaking study of Jeremy Bentham's moral philosophy corrects many misconceptions concerning this founder of modern hedonism. Mr. Baumgardt is consultant in philosophy at the Library of Congress. 586 pages, $7.50

"The greatest of American diaries and one of the world's great diaries."

—ALLAN NEVINS

THE DIARY OF

George Templeton Strong

Edited by ALLAN NEVINS and MILTON HALSEY THOMAS

This vast four-volume diary is a day-to-day account of forty historically, politically, and socially fascinating years—1835 to 1875. The nearly five million words of George Templeton Strong's record, skillfully edited by a distinguished historian and a noted archivist, are now available to give historians perhaps the clearest picture they have of any period in United States history.

The qualities of a great diarist are present to a remarkable degree in George Templeton Strong. He showed early his acute intellect, in a precocious interest in the classics, and his unfailing humor and humility. The varied interests of his mature years—education, politics, law, music—give his journal authority based on serious study in many fields.

The great and near-great of Strong's time, many of whom he knew intimately, appear vividly, sometimes in an unsympathetic light. His commentaries on the theatre remind one of Pepys; his opinions on contemporary arts and letters read like a more informal Hazlitt. Scandal in high society, the trivia of national fads like phrenology and hydropathy, stand recorded with his penetrating analyses of political battles, and an account of his own role in Civil War affairs. Here is a tremendous American document, a source book for all future historians, and a completely absorbing, enormously readable series.

Four volumes, illustrated, boxed, $35.00

THE PROTESTANT CRUSADE

By Ray Allen Billington. "This is a sobering book. It reminds us that religious toleration has been a legal rather than a social fact in our history . . . reveals how a curious amalgam of economic envy and religious fanaticism can be sublimated into a moral crusade, and how serious are the implications and consequences of such a crusade for the crusaders as well as for the victims. Mr. Billington confines himself largely to the generation from 1820 to 1860."—Henry Steele Commager in The New York Herald Tribune (rev. of original edition) A reissue of this notable study of anti-Catholicism in the United States will be available Spring, 1953

READINGS IN THE HISTORY OF THE ANCIENT WORLD

THE ANCIENT WORLD

By Wallace E. Caldwell. A one-volume study of the ancient world from the beginning of recorded history to the fall of the Roman empire. 589 pp. $5.00

THE MAKING OF AMERICAN DEMOCRACY

By Billington, Loewenberg, and Brockunier. "A fine integration of political, economic, social, and cultural movements, with connecting paragraphs establishing a sense of historical continuity."—Mississippi Valley Historical Review Vol. I, $2.25. Vol. II, $2.75. Combined Vol. $5.50

THE UNITED STATES: American Democracy in World Perspective

By Billington, Loewenberg, and Brockunier. "... few books make such a firm effort to escape provincialism."—Social Education 594 pp. $5.60

CANADA: A Political and Social History

By Edgar McInnis. A history of Canada that gives due emphasis to all the interacting factors of economics, politics, geography, and traditions which have shaped the present Dominion. 574 pp. $5.00

THE MEDIEVAL WORLD

By Loren C. MacKinney. Provides an 80-page summary of ancient history and then presents cultural, social, and economic history against a framework of political history. Gives unusually full attention to the development of art, architecture, literature and music. 81 + 801 pp. $8.00
