The Roots of French Imperialism in Eastern Asia.

By John F. Cady, Professor of History, Ohio University

PUBLISHED FOR THE AMERICAN HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION

French imperialist activity in eastern Asia between 1841 and 1861 is the particular concern of this historical study. The book is based on a study of French archival material and other primary sources and is thereby able to present a rounded picture of unfolding French policy.

Mediaeval Feudalism.

By Carl Stephenson, Professor Emeritus of History, Cornell University

A LITTLE
MASTERPIECE OF HISTORICAL
WRITING

"Professor Carl Stephenson's little book, Mediaeval Feudalism, is an admirably lucid, well written introduction to the study of a subject which has lately, . . . been given fresh life and meaning. . . . The book is valuable because it gives crisply and clearly, without any equivocation, a description of the ruling elements in western society during the period between the days of Charles Martel and King Henry II of England."—*Eng. Mediaeval Institutions: Selected Essays.

By Carl Stephenson, Professor Emeritus of History, Cornell University. Edited by Bryce D. Lyon, Harvard University

TEN ESSAYS
BY A LEADING MEDIAEVALIST

These essays, dealing with some of the key problems of the Middle Ages—seigniorialism, feudalism, Domesday Book, and other subjects—are representative of the writing and research done by Professor Stephenson over the course of thirty years. They are here printed in book form for the first time.

Announcing

A Shorter History of the United States

Leland D. Baldwin, University of Pittsburgh

*Written in response to hundreds of requests from teachers for a one-volume American History text with the same stimulating approach that made The Stream of American History the most important contribution to the field in more than a decade . . .*

A Shorter History of the United States is a completely new book based on the widely used two-volume work The Stream of American History. It has these fine features in common with The Stream of American History and Recent American History by the same author:

- Balanced presentation of political, economic, sociological, and cultural forces
- Objective appraisal of the United States in a world setting
- Unforgettable pen portraits of prominent figures
- Fair treatment of controversial subjects
- A lively and vivid style that delights students
- Many black and white maps, all drawn to illustrate specific points

The Stream of American History

Volume One • Volume Two

Recent American History

SOURCE PROBLEMS IN TWENTIETH CENTURY HISTORY

Arthur L. Funk
University of Florida

For each of the twelve major world problems presented in this book, the author provides (1) an introduction containing historical background, (2) extracts from documents giving both sides of the problem, and (3) statements and questions for the student's consideration.

THE GREAT POWERS AND EASTERN EUROPE

John A. Lukacs
Chestnut Hill College and LaSalle College

This book gives the student a remarkably clear account of the recent history of one of the most crucial areas in the twentieth-century world. It includes full, readable notes, helpful tables, detailed maps, and an extremely thorough bibliography.

THE MAKING OF AMERICAN HISTORY REVISED AND ENLARGED

Edited by Donald Sheehan, Smith College. The Revised and Enlarged Edition of this widely used two-volume work offers interpretations of the American past by thirty-five of our most distinguished historians, including selections drawn from both recognized classics and the best of recent scholarship. Like the previous edition, these new volumes cover many aspects of American culture—social, economic, political, intellectual—and offer a practical solution to the problem of supplying students with material for outside reading. (List $2.90 each volume)

THE MAKING OF MODERN EUROPE

Edited by Herman Ausubel, Columbia University. These two handsome volumes offer eighty essays designed to accompany any of the standard texts in modern European History. "You have come as near to solving the problem of effective outside reading for college classes in European History as can be done," writes Geoffrey Brunn. "The selection, emphasis, and distribution have my unstinted admiration." (List $3.25 each volume)

THE MAKING OF ENGLISH HISTORY

Edited by R. L. Schuyler and Herman Ausubel, Columbia University. Few college libraries can afford to buy enough copies of materials essential for the English History course. Hence the importance of this book, with its seventy essays by some of the leading historians of our century. The work offers an unusually broad view: political, constitutional, social, economic, religious, literary, and intellectual history are represented. (List $5.60)

ECONOMIC FORCES IN AMERICAN HISTORY

By George Soule, Bennington College. Focusing on important developments in American economic growth, Professor Soule traces each theme "vertically," as it unfolds, and "horizontally," to demonstrate the interrelationship of forces. (List $4.75)

WESTERN CIVILIZATION : THE STORY OF OUR HERITAGE

Ready for your examination
SPRING 1955

VOLUME I, by C. HAROLD KING, University of Miami (Earliest Civilization through 1648 A.D.)

This is a fascinating, absorbing and handsome new text for the basic History of Western Civilization course. Written with the beginning student in mind, it comes to grips with those main currents in political and cultural development which make up our heritage. The text is written in a style which is as vivid and colorful as the story it tells. The many maps and illustrations are closely integrated with and an important part of the text. Each of the 32 chapters has a short bibliography in addition to the extensive and scholarly bibliography for the text as a whole.

VOLUME II, by ARTHUR J. MAY, University of Rochester (Mid-seventeenth Century to the Present)

This book surveys in 33 chapters the continuing evolution of western civilization and its planetary impact from the mid-seventeenth century to the present. Emphasis rests upon the fundamentals of the western inheritance. As the present is approached, the narrative broadens out, a quarter of the chapters dealing with developments since 1919. Political happenings are by no means slighted, but other realms of endeavor are allotted due attention. The whole of humanity is brought into focus—the transit of western ways to the Orient and Middle East. An unusual amount of space is devoted to Russia, the Far East and the Americas.

EUROPE SINCE 1815

by Preston Slosson, University of Michigan

Professor Slosson's Europe Since 1815, is a skillful integration of the political, social, economic and intellectual forces that went into the making of Europe as it is today. Each section is preceded by illustrations of personalities and events of the period and the text itself is liberally supplemented by maps. Designed for the one-semester course in Europe Since 1815, the critical bibliography of over 1000 titles makes it easily adaptable to the full year course.

Professor Slosson has daringly cut and pared old facts; he has charted new courses through old details to provide a real and fully comprehensible survey of the past century and a half. This is a distinguished book and should be welcomed by students and teachers alike.

A HISTORY OF ENGLAND

by Goldwin Smith, Wayne University

This is a dramatic presentation of English history written in a fluent and lively style. The vast body of available material has been gleaned with perspective, judgment and scholarship to create a balanced text for the undergraduate student seeking an understanding of those forces which shaped and guide contemporary England.

A History of England is, in my opinion, more than a college textbook. It is a thoughtful guide to the main problems in the evolution of the English state. While the narrative is detailed to the point of furnishing reference material, the perspective is never obscured and the judgments seem to me to be sound.

An important new basic text

World Civilizations

By EDWARD McNALL BURNS, Rutgers University
and PHILIP L. RALPH, Lake Erie College

Stemming from and enlarging on Professor Burns' highly successful Western Civilizations, this new two-volume text has been prepared on the premise, shared by many, that one must view the world as a whole in order to acquire an understanding of each of its parts. No major region of the globe has been omitted. The Middle East, India, China, Japan, Europe, the United States, Latin America, and the Commonwealth of Nations have each received thorough treatment. The threads of historical narrative have been skillfully interwoven to show the contributions of each successive culture to civilization as a whole and to point up the increasingly important roles played by Asia and the Americas in the present age. All the maps in World Civilizations have been especially prepared to supplement the written text. In addition, the two volumes are profusely illustrated with half-tones, line-cuts, chronological tables, and other auxiliaries.

Publication in February, 1955

An extensive revision of a leading textbook

The American Constitution

By ALFRED H. KELLY and WINFRED A. HARBISON
Wayne University

This is a revised and expanded edition of a book which has already established itself as the foremost text in the field of American Constitutional history. All the recent Constitutional changes and pressing issues of the contemporary period are extensively treated in this new edition. The chapter on civil liberties has been revised to include discussion of the latest developments in such areas as racial segregation and trials of Communists. Two entirely new chapters, "The Constitution and the Second World War," and "The Constitution in an Age of Crisis," expand on this theme, dealing clearly and cogently with such vital issues as the federal loyalty program, anti-Communist activities, proposed treaty-power limitations, Congressional investigations, and national security in the "Cold War." In addition, numerous changes have been made in earlier chapters which bring the subject matter into line with recent developments and the latest historical research. The list of selected readings and the table of cases have been revised, expanded, and brought up to date.

GEOGRAPHY DESK OUTLINE MAPS

History and Geography teachers alike will welcome the new E.R.B. series of desk outline maps. They are intelligently conceived, with serious attention to present-day student needs; are expertly drawn; clearly printed in blue on substantial white paper, and are sufficiently wide in scope to meet every classroom need.

LOWELL RAGATZ, Professor of European History, The Ohio State University

* Boundaries, as of 1954, and rivers (unnamed) are clearly depicted.

* Water areas are shaded in blue to show them in sharp contrast with land masses.

* These up-to-date maps make an ideal base on which to record Historical, Geographical, or other data.

PROBING OUR PAST

By MERLE CURTI

Published in honor of Professor Curti's presidency of the American Historical Association (1953-1954), here is a choice collection of essays the author wrote from 1926 to 1953. They deal with historiography, the transmission and context of ideas, democracy, and American impacts on the rest of the world.

Sir Henry Clinton's

The American Rebellion

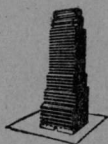

The British Commander-in-Chief's Narrative of his Campaigns, 1775–1782

edited by William B. Willcox

The only extensive, first-hand account of the problems of high command on either side in the Revolutionary War, revealing many details of American as well as British operations. Since Clinton's purpose in writing this account is to explain why the British failed, he is biased; but he deals with the crucial questions of the war.

TWO Important Books

THE AMERICAN STORY

Volume I: YOUTH
Volume II: MATURITY

from
McGraw-Hill
on American History

By ROBERT E. RIEGEL, Dartmouth College, and DAVID F. LONG, University of New Hampshire. McGraw-Hill Series in History. In press

A two-volume introductory college text, the general organization of which is chronological by periods but topical within each period. Volume I covers the period from the earliest exploration to 1877. Volume II treats the period of 1877 to date.

In fusing social—including economic and intellectual—history with the more traditional emphasis on the political story the authors succeed in weaving all the strands of American history into a more meaningful and understandable pattern. Biographical material is emphasized to illustrate the real significance of important individuals in the total picture. There is an excellent coverage of all phases of American life, and the works are rich in treatment of foreign affairs.

THE UNITED STATES IN WORLD HISTORY

Second Edition

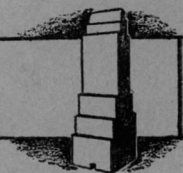

By JOHN B. RAE and THOMAS H. D. MAHONEY, Massachusetts Institute of Technology McGraw-Hill Series in History. In press

This careful revision presents a broad view of United States history, including significant world developments. As part of a general world society it traces its growth from the colonial foundations to its present position of world leadership. Considerable stress is placed on the interrelationship between the United States and the rest of the world of political, economic, social, cultural, and intellectual forces. The text covers the entire period from the discovery of America to the Eisenhower administration.

PRELUDE TO POINT FOUR

American Technical Missions Overseas, 1838-1938

By Merle Curti and Kendall Birr

Wisely administered, a foreign assistance program can become a force for good in the future of many nations; poorly managed it can do irreparable harm to American prestige throughout the rest of the world. The authors of this book have made a survey and interpretation of American experience with technical aid abroad, from 1838 to 1938. The scope of these missions varied all the way from simple surveys to complex attempts to remake whole societies. Present day policy makers may well ponder the conclusions inevitable in this study.

THE STORY OF MARCUS
GARVEY AND THE UNIVERSAL
NEGRO IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

By E. David Cronon

Born in Jamaica, in 1887, Marcus Garvey came to the United States in 1916. This young Negro Moses enrolled thousands of American and West Indian Negroes in his Universal Negro Improvement Association and promulgated his philosophy of racial self-help throughout the world. Although Garvey achieved little in the way of permanent economic improvement for his people, he helped to point out the fires of social discontent that smolder in the Negro world. By stimulating race pride he left a legacy of Negro nationalism that is very much a part of the contemporary scene. To be published Spring 1955.
